Retail Grocers Will Now Use the Boycott to Bring Other Commission Men to Time.

All this week the Retail Merchants' Commercial Association, through the agency of a committee appointed by them for the purpose, have been making a ceaseless and tireless onslaught upon the commission merchants to secure their signatures to the agreement similar to that obtained by the association from the grocers and millers, whereby the commission merchants obligate themselves not to sell their wares to consumers. The commission men met with the committee from the retail merchants several days ago and asked for time to consider the request, and finally decided that they could not comply.

The committee reported to their association and were reappointed by that body with two additional members to make another attempt to secure the signatures to the agreement. The committee then adopted new tactics, which were crowned with success. The committee was composed of the following well-known grocers: Coulter, Heinicke, Austin, Nackenhorst, Crouch, Cornett and Flaherty.

Yesterday afternoon the committee came to the conclusion that on account of the perfect organization of the commission men it was best to deal with them individually, and in pursuance of this plan they agreed among themselves as to which commission house was to be visited by each member of the committee and each "nailed his man" so to speak and gave him no opportunity to consult with the other merchants on the street, until he had given a positive answer one way or the other.

Mr. Crouch succeeded in getting the signature of L. P. Adams to the agreement, and the committee at once ceased their efforts to get signatures from any of the others who had upon the former occasion refused to sign. The retail merchants now declare that they do not care whether any others sign or not, but that they will give their trade only to those who do so. Late yesterday afternoon every member of the committee called at Adams's commission house and gave an order for goods aggregating several hundred dollars. Some of the members had never before purchased from him, but the retail merchants say that in case the other commission men are obdurate Adams will have the trade of the association, which embraces in its membership nearly every retail grocer in the city. The agreement signed by Adams is as follows:

I, the undersigned, commission merchant of the city of Indianapolis, Ind., hereby agree and bind myself not to sell to consumers, excepting hotels, restaurants, city, county and State institutions. This to be in force at all times, excepting Saturday afternoon, for perishable goods.

J. L. Keach, also agreed to comply with the request.

RATHER STARTLING TESTIMONY.

Mrs. Wadley's Daughter Declares that Her Stepfather Vowed Vengeance on His Wife.

Miss Eva Dorman, stepdaughter of Charles Wadley, testified before the coroner yesterday in the investigation of her mother's peculiar death. The girl is seventeen years old, exceedingly pretty and bright, and talks of the trouble between her father and mother without hesitation. Her evidence was lengthy and dealt principally with the domestic affairs of Mr. and Mrs. Wadley, which, Eva says, were not at all pleasant. She avers that Wadley was very jealous of her mother, and accused her of infidelity often. The girl remembered hearing him tell her mother two days before her death that he would be revenged if he spent the rest of his life in the penitentiary.

An Italian Fruit Vendor's Brutality. Michael Vine is an Italian fruit vendor, with a place at No. 17 Kentucky avenue. Michael has a sister Josie, who is sixteen and quite pretty. He objects to her standing out on the sidewalk in front of his stand, and when she does persists in drubbing her severely. Yesterday he was engaged in administering a brutal whipping to the girl when patrolman Albert Duty appeared and locked him up for assault and battery. Josie was found to have been beaten in an inhuman manner.

Postal Clerk Resigns.

Major Hitt has received the resignation of George T. Drake, a postal clerk running between Pittsburg and St. Louis, on the Panhandle road. He retires to go into mercantile business with his father. Major Hitt says he dislikes to accept the resignation, as Mr. Drake was an especially valuable clerk. The vacancy has not been filled, but will be made from the civil-service list.
